Spring 2013 Course Descriptions:

FTT 10101 Basics of Film and Television 3 Credits
Jim Collins 1:55-2:45 MW

FTT 11101 Lab 7:00-9:00 pm M

FTT 12101
01 Tutorial 9:35-10:25 F
02 Tutorial 9:35-10:25 F
03 Tutorial 10:40-11:30 F
04 Tutorial 11:45-12:35 F

This class introduces students to the study of film and television. Students will learn the basic formal and aesthetic properties of screen media – editing, framing, sound, mise-en-scene. Students will also learn different ways of grouping and discussing film and television – industrial analysis, auteur theory, genre studies, star studies, feminist approaches, and more. Students will see a wide range of films and TV shows in weekly labs. The class will consist of two weekly lectures and one tutorial. Assignments will include papers, texts, and blogs.

Class and Lab held in the Browning Cinema.
Co-requisites: FTT 11101 & 12101.
Cross list: FTT 20101 / 21101 & 22101.

This course serves as a pre-requisite to all upper-level film and television courses and fulfills the Fine Arts requirement.
Freshman only.
FTT 10701 01  Introduction to Theatre  3 Credits
Ken Cole  10:40-11:30  MWF

A study of theatre viewed from three perspectives: historical, literary, and contemporary production practices. Through lectures, readings, and discussions, students will study this art form and understand its relevance to their own life as well as to other art forms. A basic understanding of the history of theatre and the recognition of the duties and responsibilities of the personnel involved in producing live theatre performances will allow students to become more objective in their own theatre experiences.

Requirements: Attend classes and live theatre performances. View screenings, complete papers and projects, 1 mid-term exam, and 1 final exam.
Cross list: FTT 20701.
This course fulfills the Fine Arts requirement.
Freshmen only.

FTT 10701 02  Introduction to Theatre  3 Credits
Marcus Stephens  12:30-1:45  TR

Freshmen only.
New American plays are produced in theatrical venues across the U.S. every year. However, students rarely have immediate access to many of these unpublished works. This course provides students with the unique opportunity to study unpublished play texts and establish direct contact with working playwrights currently being produced on U.S. stages. Students will analyze these new theatrical texts and actively engage in the new play development process. This course is ideal for student actors, directors, designers, writers or any student who desires to engage with the current state of playwriting in the American theater.

Note: Freshmen ONLY

The goals of this course are threefold. First is to introduce the students to the changing forms of fashion throughout history. Second is to understand the fickle choices of fashion through an understanding of the psychology of clothing. Third is to experience how historic costumes are used and expressed in film.

The study of costume history allows an insight into more than just the garments of the period. It impacts, and is impacted by, many different forces around it. The class will use the viewing of contemporary feature films as the starting point for this study to occur. Students will have the choice to analyze the costumes in the film from different perspectives and to discuss the art form from that vantage point in both class discussions and written papers. The various topics the students can choose from will include:

- The historical accuracy of the costumes
- The style of costume in relation to architecture and décor
- The movement of the costume itself and movement of the human body while wearing the costume
- The use of fabric, color, and detail within the costume

The qualities the costumes reveal about the characters in the story

- How the costumes reflect the lifestyle of the period
- How the design of the costume for the film reflects the art style of the period
- How the costumes express the ethics and morals of the people of the period
• What the costumes reveal about the economy and business activities of the period
• What the fashions speak about the political situation of the period
• Other topics of interest, background, or curiosity that the student may bring to the class

The course meets the parameters expected for a University Seminar. The class has a strong component for the students to experience film as they study the history of costume. The students will express both orally through discussions and analytically through written papers a cognitive thought process to show their understanding of the information. The students will be able to relate the topics to areas of interest outside the normal range of the fine arts.

FTT 20009 Broadway Theatre Experience 1 Credit
Richard Donnelly  6:30-9:00 pm  W

This short course offers students the opportunity to experience live, professional theatre at its finest. The course will include three days and two nights in New York City where we will see four Broadway or off-Broadway professional productions. The dates for the trip to NYC are early Friday morning April 5 through late Sunday evening April 7, 2013. The course has a lab fee which includes round-trip bus and air transportation from Notre Dame to a Times Square hotel in Manhattan, 2 nights at the hotel, travel insurance, and the best seats available for the four shows. Prior to the trip to NYC, the class will meet to discuss the shows that will be seen, to become familiar with production practices, and to understand the structure and development of professional theatre in America. The course will culminate with a paper discussing aspects of the plays that were seen. This class will meet for three Wednesdays: March 27, April 3, and 10 from 6:30-9:00 pm.

Field Trip New York City is required.
No pre-requisites.
Department Approval required.
This course may be repeated for credit.

From Samus to Mario, Princess Zelda to James Sunderland, Jill Valentine to Master Chief, mainstream video games have offered gamers an array of male and female characters. In this course, we will analyze these various portrayals of gender. Do games always portray a masculine hero saving a damsel in distress? Do some games offer an alternative to this archetypical situation? We will examine a wide range of avatars and supporting characters within the context of storylines, digital environments, and paratexts such as cover designs, promotional materials, and strategy guides. Our investigation, however, will not be limited to character construction and narrative structure. We will also discuss gender assumptions about gamers, question the gender politics of online gaming, and think about how an avatar’s gender affects player-avatar identification. Course requirements will include class discussion, readings, quizzes, and writing assignments. In addition, students will be required to watch recorded gaming sessions on YouTube as well as play a game or games themselves.

FTT 20260  La telenovela: history-culture-production  3 Credits
Kevin Barry  9:30-10:45  TR

Students must be fluent in Spanish.
The goal of this course is to facilitate student exploration of the genre of the telenovela. Students will sharpen oral and written language skills through exposure to authentic telenovelas from Latin America, reading of authentic texts, and through the creation and production of their own telenovela. They will hone their oral and written proficiency and learn the idiosyncrasies of Hispanic culture as they write, direct, act in, tape and edit a telenovela. During this process students will also learn and apply basic videography and non-linear video and audio editing techniques.

FTT 20801 Acting for the Non-Major  3 Credits
Anton Juan  3:30-4:45 TR

This course introduces the non-theatre major into the basic elements of the art and craft of acting. The student will explore the spaces of his memory, his body in an external space, his voice and diction, and the choices he has to make, through the observation and imagination of realities. He will explore the process of looking for the sense of truth and urgency in expressing a dramatic text and a character’s will and action. This course is participatory and will involve students’ scene study presentations as well as written textual analysis to introduce scene studies.

FTT 21001 Acting: Process  3 Credits
Siiri Scott  1:30-2:45 MW

The purpose of this class is self-discovery and growth as an actor. You will be introduced to basic principles and techniques for preparation and performance, as well as a context for developing a working methodology for personal creative growth as an actor, the creation of a role, realization of a scene, and an introduction to the production process. You are expected, therefore, to know and apply these principles and processes. Scene work is prepared and rehearsed with a partner(s) outside of class for presentation in class. Written textual analysis (including detailed character study) is required for all scene work. A critical journal will reflect on assigned readings, responses to the work, and continuing assessment of personal growth.
This course is designed to introduce students to creating original work for the theater. The course will explore the writing process as well as models from contemporary U.S. theater with the aim to present a variety of paths toward creating new, vibrant plays. This is primarily a writing course. In addition, by reading and discussing ten separate dynamic play texts, we will analyze dramatic writing. Weekly writing exercises, movement work, visual arts approaches, (Continued on next page) improvisation techniques and collaborative discussions will create resources for rich play material, which each student will eventually use in a final scene, presented in a public reading at the end of the semester.

This course traces the major developments in world cinema from the post-WWII era to the present. The course will examine the shifting social, economic, technological and aesthetic conditions of this period, especially the demise of the Hollywood studio system, the rise of television, and the increasing importance of new technologies and increasing auxiliary markets. The course will not be limited to Hollywood filmmaking, but will also look at a number of major international film movements. The course will be a combination of lecture and discussion. Formal assessments will include exams and research papers.
Co-requisite: FTT 31102.
Pre-requisite: FTT 10101/20101 or by permission of Instructor.

The family forges identity. Moving images forge the imagination. Both help shape the way we see ourselves and the world. In this course we will examine the intersection of the two by watching and discussing representations of the family in Japanese cinema, from the sun-drenched melancholy of (Continued on next page)
Ozu Yasujiro’s Late Spring, to the harrowing survival story of Takahata Isao’s Grave of the Fireflies, to the absurd comedy of Morita Yoshimitsu's Family Game. In the process we will explore issues of film form and technique, translation, and the various incarnations and configurations of Japanese families over time. Readings in film analysis and Japanese film history will be supplemented by sociological sources. Some of the questions we will explore: What role has cinema served in the articulation of Japanese identity in the modern period? How do filmic representations of Japanese families capture or depart from observed realities? How do gender roles operate within the family and the larger culture? What are some of the distinctive characteristics of Japanese cinematic practice in various historical periods? How do families endure in the face of historical trauma?

Interested in pursuing a career in feature animation, special effects, or video games? This class will be your first step in learning the tools and techniques of 3D digital content creation for the entertainment industry. Students will learn the basics of modeling, texturing, animation, lighting, and rendering using the industry-standard program, Autodesk Maya 2013. Through tutorials and lessons, students will get hands-on, practical experience in the major aspects of production in Maya. Students will also learn foundational principles of animation and 3D design

FTT 30417  Gender and Fan Studies    3 Credits
Darlene Hampton  3:00-4:15  MW

In this course we will explore the concept of media fandom: definitions, history, analysis, representations, and practices through the lenses of gender and sexuality. Some questions we will address are: What is a ‘fan’? Why is it important to study fans at all? Can we consider fan communities examples of subcultures? How have internet technologies and social networking impacted fan cultures and communities? How do discourses of gender and sexuality impact cultural and academic representations of fans? For example, why are some practices and communities considered acceptable and fairly ‘normal’ while others are represented as odd or obsessive? We will approach these questions through a range of social and cultural theories, including: textual analysis, anthropology/ethnography, feminist theory, and theories of performance. Assignments for the course will include writing assignments, discussion leading, exams, and a final project.

FTT 30461  History of Television    3 Credits
Christine Becker  1:30-2:45  MW
FTT 31461  Lab    6:30-8:30 pm  W

Television has been widely available in the United States for only half a century, yet already it has become a key means through which we understand our culture. Our course examines this vital medium from three perspectives. First, we will look at the industrial, economic and technological forces that have shaped U.S. television since its inception. These factors help explain how U.S. television adopted the format of advertiser-supported broadcast networks and why this format is changing today. Second, we will explore television’s role in American social and political life: how TV has represented cultural changes in the areas of gender, class, race and ethnicity. Third, we will discuss specific narrative and visual strategies that characterize program formats. Throughout the semester we will demonstrate how television and U.S. culture mutually influence one another, as television both constructs (Continued on next page) their view of the world and is affected by social and cultural forces within the U.S.

FTT 30463  Broadcasting and Cable    3 Credits
Karen Heisler  12:30-1:45   TR

This course focuses on how the broadcast and cable television industries operate in contemporary society. Lecture/discussion sessions will examine topics such as programming strategies and practices, regulatory guidelines, sales and advertising, ratings and research methodology, ethical issues and concerns, cultural effects and news, sports and entertainment programming.

Must be enrolled in FTT.
Interested non-majors by permission of Instructor.

FTT 30468  Ethics in Journalism    3 Credits
Gary Sieber   3:30-4:45  TR

“The primary purpose of journalism,” according to media observers Bill Kovach and Tom Rosenstiel, “is to provide citizens with the information they need to be free and self-governing.” That’s a lofty goal in any age – but it’s especially difficult in the current era of market-driven journalism that has produced fabrication and plagiarism scandals, political cheerleading on news networks, “gotcha” videos on the internet and social media, and an outright obsession with celebrities. Students in this course will come away with a deep-seated understanding of journalism’s purpose, develop a disciplined and repeatable process of making sound ethical choices when confronted with tough situations, and be able to articulate ethically defensible arguments explaining their decisions. They will accomplish these goals by reading, viewing, debating, analyzing, and writing about actual cases and issues in the news. The focus will be as much on what journalists should do, as on what they should not do.

This course analyzes and evaluates the art form of theatre within its larger historical and societal context. Treating the art form as a culture industry, the course examines periods and sites to understand the theatrical event, its audiences, and its methods. Each unit emphasizes theatre as a site of cultural debate and political and social change and considers the larger role of representation in human society throughout time. Attendance is required.
This course fulfills the Fine Arts requirement.

FTT 30800  Scenic Painting  3 Credits
Marcus Stephens  11:00-12:15  TR
An introduction to the tools and techniques used in painted and textured scenery for the stage and screen. Students will learn and apply the variety of methods used in creating a wide range of painted effects; from the basic wood treatments to the advanced marbling and faux finishes. Outside of class painting time will be required.

FTT 30802  Lighting Design  3 Credits
Kevin Dreyer  9:30-10:45  TR
This class will teach you what is involved in creating and executing a lighting design. We will cover lighting equipment and safety. You will design and draft a light plot, and you will learn how to write and use paperwork. Most importantly, the goal of this class will be to teach you how to see light. There will be lectures, videos, projects (take-home and in-class), hands-on training, and required attendance at TWO performances. The semester culminates with a final design project, as well as written components. Open to all FTT students.
FTT 30901  Race and the American Theatre  3 Credits
Yael Prizant  4:30-5:45  MW

This course will engage theatrical works for, by, and about hyphenated Americans (African-Americans, Asian-Americans, etc.) Students will see live theatre, theatre on video, and interviews with dramatists and performers. Reading and understanding plays and various theoretical materials on race, culture and immigration will also be vital components of the course. The course will require a large research project based on a topic of the students' choosing. No pre-requisites required. Cross list: AMST 30702, ILS 30015

FTT 30903  Adaptation and Translation for Stage and Screen  3 Credits
Yael Prizant  1:30-2:45  MW

Using the basic principles of production dramaturgy, this course will focus on how materials get adapted and/or translated for the stage and screens (both television and film). We will consider what materials make this leap and why, who does this work, and how they do so. Politics, ethics, and aesthetics will shape our discussions. We will also study key decisions about structure and form. Students will have the opportunity to practice these skills, yet no previous experience or language proficiency is required. Open to all FTT majors.

FTT 31002  Voice and Movement  3 Credits
Siiri Scott  3:00-4:15  MW

A course designed to help advanced acting students to focus on kinesthetic awareness. The actor will identify and work to remove physical and vocal tensions that impede unhabituated movement and natural sound production. Through movement and vocal exercises created for actors, students will experience what "prepared readiness" and sound-sense for the stage consists of, and how to meet those demands. Must be enrolled in FTT or by permission of Instructor.
FTT 31005 01  Theatre Production Workshop  Variable Credits
Kevin Dreyer  5:10-6:00pm  MWF

FTT 31005 02  Anton Juan  5:10-6:00pm  MWF
A workshop course in the process of theatre production in which students assume a major performance or nonperformance production responsibility including, but not limited to: stage manager, assistant stage manager, prop master, costumer, technical director or assistant director or actor.
Permission of Instructor required.

FTT 31403  Moving Pictures  3 Credits
Richard Gray  9:30-12:15  TR
This is an introductory course in creating time-based imagery with digital still cameras and video cameras. Students will work with their own photographs, video footage and recorded sound to create works that blur the boundaries of photography and video.
Assignments will explore a variety of visual possibilities including non-traditional narratives, sound-works and conceptual constructions. Students will be responsible for producing several assigned projects using Final Cut Express including an independently designed final project. Final projects will be screened publicly at the end of the semester.
Materials fee: $50
Cross list: ARST 31403 (Primary)

FTT 35501  FTT Internship  Variable Credits

FTT 40249  Italian Cinema: Realities of History  3 Credits
Zygmunt Baranski  2:00-3:15  TR

This course explores the construction and development of the Italian cinematic realist tradition from the silent era to the early 1970s, although its primary focus is on the period 1934-1966, which stretches from the appearance of Blasetti's openly fascist "historical" reconstruction, La vecchia guardia, to Pasolini's "eccentric" exercise in Left-wing commitment, Uccellacci e uccellini, with its mix of expressionist and hyper-realist techniques. At the centre of this period are found some of Italy's most highly regarded films made by directors, such as Vittorio DeSica, Roberto Rossellini, and Luchino Visconti, who belonged to the neo-realist movement (1945-53). These filmmakers rejected escapist cinema and tried to make films that examined the contemporary experiences of ordinary Italians. As well as analyzing the films in themselves, the course examines the formal and ideological continuities and differences between neo-realist films and their silent and fascist predecessors. In a similar way, it analyses neo-realism's impact on later film-makers, such as Federico Fellini, Pietro Germi, Pier Paolo Pasolini, Gillo Pontecorvo, Dino Risi, and Francesco Rosi, who attempted to develop new versions of cinematic realism. Finally, the course aims to locate the films in their historical and cultural contexts and to address theoretical issues arising from the concept of realism.

FTT 40412  Advanced Filmmaking  3 Credits
Jeff Spoonhower  9:30 - 10:45  TR
FTT 41412  Lab  1 Credit
11:00-12:15  TR

Working in teams, students will direct and shoot short narrative digital video projects on Red Digital Cinema cameras, edit in Avid Media Composer (or Adobe Premiere Pro CS6), record sound effects and dialogue digitally in Avid Pro Tools, and perform a variety of post-production tasks (compositing, color-correction, tracking, visual effects) in After Effects CS6. In this class, particular emphasis will be placed on sound and music design, as well as post-production techniques. In addition to practicing the technical elements, topics such as effective story structure and directing of actors will be discussed. This is an advanced digital video production course, which requires significant amounts of shooting, editing, sound design, and post-production work outside of class. All students are expected to assist their classmates as crew members on their shoots.

FTT 40429  Gender and National Identity  3 Credits
In Modern Spanish Cinema
Carlos Jerez-Farran  3:00-4:15  MW

The aim of the course is to introduce students to a selection of Spanish films from the 1970’s to more contemporary ones. We will see and analyze approximately 12 films by different directors with the purpose of giving students a sense of the variety of styles and topics that characterize Spanish cinema in the last twenty-five years. The films will be contextualized socially, historically, politically and culturally in order to give a better understanding of their relationship with the time and country in which they are set. Some of the themes to be analyzed are: nation-formation, the Spanish Civil War, stereotypical Spanishness, censorship, postmodernist aesthetics, and gender construction. Besides expanding their knowledge of contemporary Spanish culture, it is expected that by the end of the semester students will also have learnt how to analyze a film. Some of the films to be studied are: El espíritu de la colmena (1973), Cria cuervos (1975), Carmen (1983), Mujeres al borde de un ataque de nervios (1987), Jamón, jamón, (1992), Acción mutante, (1993), La ardilla roja (1993), and Hable con ella (2001), among others.

FTT 40440  Film Topics: Film Noir  3 Credits
Don Crafton  3:00-4:15  MW

FTT 41440  Lab
7:00-9:00pm  W

The rain-soaked streets. The scream of tires cutting through the night city. The gunsels clutching his rod. The femme fatale with hair curling over one eye. Blood and cordite. The flashbacks within flashbacks. The plots so circuitous they make you want to throttle the screenwriter until he gurgles his last rattle. Did I mention flashbacks? Yes, this is film noir, the most elusive and hypnotic movie genre. Or is it a genre? These films began with 1930s existential French cineastes expressing their malaise, their world-weariness and their need for a Gauloise, then spread to Hollywood. There the German émigré filmmakers gave the form its unique touch of Expressionist cinematography and wartime despair. A style that was both visually exciting and narratively challenging, it thrived on black-and-white film stock, cheap studio backlots and location on the mean streets of Los Angeles. It became the worldview of the 1950s and the image of the decadent twentieth-century metropolis. A generation later, film noir was rediscovered by young filmmakers and critics and so its second life began as retro-noir and neo-noir. This course will examine the rise and fall of this mode of filmmaking, its philosophies and aesthetics, and its fascinating forms.

FTT 40445 The Movie Musical 3 Credits
Pam Wojcik 2:00-3:15 TR
FTT 41445 Lab 5:00-7:00 R

This course examines the musical on film from the earliest sound films to the present. The class will look at musicals from Hollywood, but will also consider the French musical, Bollywood musical films, and postmodern musicals. We will consider different subgenres of the musicals, such as the backstage musical, the animated musical, the fantasy musical, the black cast musical, the folk musical, and the rock musical. In addition to considering the influence of Broadway on the movie musical, we will consider the ways in which the musical’s life has been extended in contemporary digital culture through flash mobs, indie online musicals and more. We will look at the different styles of different Hollywood studios, such as MGM and Fox; the role of producers, such as Arthur Freed; the role of directors like Busby Berkeley, Vincente Minnelli, and Bob Fosse; composers like Rogers and Hammerstein and Stephen Sondheim; and stars such as Fred Astaire, Gene Kelly, Judy Garland, Frank Sinatra, Judy Holliday, Lena Horne, Carmen Miranda, and Barbra Streisand. Throughout, we will attend to questions of race and gender, including a consideration of how romance works in the musical, how masculinity and musical spectacle work together, the queerness of the musical, the representation of women, the role of African American performers, and questions of diversity and spectatorship. The class will have weekly screenings and additional films to be viewed online.

FTT 40495 Television as a Storytelling Medium 3 Credits
Christine Becker 4:30-5:45 MW
FTT 41495 Lab 6:30-8:30pm W

In a communications world dominated by visual culture, television has become society's primary storyteller. Stories are packaged and presented for our consumption in scripted dramas and sitcoms, unscripted reality shows and docudramas, news broadcasts and sporting events, and even commercials and promos. Through exploring the structures, methods, meanings, and impacts of television's various narrative forms, this course will consider how the medium of television enables creators and viewers to tap into the fundamental cultural practice of storytelling. Across the semester, students will read theories of narratology and assessments of television's narrative techniques, screen a variety of narrative examples (chiefly from American television, though some non-American television might be screened), and write their own critical analyses of television's storytelling practices. The class meetings will be primarily driven by discussions, supplemented by lectures, and the assignments will include periodic writing assignments, a final exam, and a term paper on a topic of the student's choosing.
